

To enhance their exposure to careers in Chemistry, our Chemistry and AP Chemistry students attended the celebration of National Chemistry Week in Chicago held at DePaul University on October 24. The event was co-sponsored by the American Chemical Society-Chicago Section, DePaul University, and a number of private companies and organizations in Chicagoland. There were exhibits sponsored by these groups as well as demonstrations by teachers and their students. Lee Marek, a retired Chemistry teacher who has appeared in a number of David Letterman shows, gave a presentation/demonstration. Also a talk was given by Professor Adam Braunchenweig from Northwestern University on nanotechnology, specifically on molecular printing, in which he discussed recent advances in technology designed to meet the demand for faster and more energy efficient computing in the future.

Jimmy Cabrera, Christian Arevalo, Adrian Febus and William Beltran, Class of 2011

Andrew Murphy, Nick Galloway, John Kaiser, and David Strenk, Class of 2011